German Journal of Acupuncture and Related Techniques

Deutsche Zeitschrift für Akupunktur (DZA) German Journal of Acupuncture and Related Techniques

DZA is the journal of acupuncture with the highest print-run outside China. It is designed as a platform for researchers and clinicians focussing on studies in acupuncture and related techniques, such as Laser Therapy, Neural Therapy, Tuina, Dietetics, Herbal Therapy and Homeopathy.

DZA regards acupuncture and related techniques as evidence-based forms of complementary and alternative medicine and as a part of integrative medicine. It is a peer-reviewed journal which publishes articles on clinical and basic research, reviews, education and case histories as well as letters to the editor written in German or English. Publication is quarterly.

To achieve maximum visibility, DZA is available in print as well as online on Elsevier's electronic platform ScienceDirect, one of the largest online collections of published scientific research with over 8.5 million articles from over 2500 journals.

DZA is currently indexed in EMBASE, Scopus and Cochrane Library. An application has been made in 2008 to be indexed in MEDLINE.

If you have original research articles which you consider to publish, we would be pleased to work together with you to increase the impact and visibility of your work and of our journal. Our state-of-the-art online submission system (<http://ees.elsevier.com/dza>) makes submitting easy and guarantees a fast review time.

For any further information or contact details for specific questions, please visit the journal's homepage at www.elsevier.de/dza.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,
Elsevier GmbH
